knowing you have to make it to the smallest room before you blow chunks but throw some crutches and some vistor's bags into the equation and it becomes a lot more precarious.

Yesterday the plaster cast was removed to reveal, not so much a leg, but a matted dry mess of hair and skin. Before you get too excited the bone is still broken. But regardless of its state it was good to see it again. No more having to tie a plastic bag around my leg every time I get into the shower.

Even more notes from an injured editor

I bet you are all wondering when the two bits of fibular in my left leg are finally going to fuse. If anyone knows then please let me know because I haven't a clue and neither it seems do the doctors. Every time I visit the surgery I always leave disappointed with more x-rays and assorted prescriptions. I think I'm personally financing Dr Blancs retirement fund.

This week my pain was taken to a new level when I ingested something that disagreed with me. For a night and day I spent a lot of time either sitting or praying to the porcelain god. If dealing with the contents of your stomach trying to escape as quickly as possible wasn't bad enough the uncertainty of making it to the loo in time is another. I'm sure I'm not alone in getting what I like to call the 15 second warning. When you wake

THE SURGEON GENERAL WARNS

Doing ski seasons can be highly addictive, can seriously damage your sanity, result in a general lack of sleep, makes your arse bigger, increase the chances of getting a blow job in the skidoo hut outside Kalico and waking up next to a complete stranger.

Boss des Bosses updates

After chatting to the organiser he has reported that Chamonix has recently had a good dump of snow making the bumps a good size. (with more scheduled for this week).

Tom is contemplating returning the course to it's original position above the Plan Joran restaurant, it was moved from here about 9 years ago to fit in with the Chamjam set up and to avoid having to move sound systems about during that hectic week. A permanent FUN Park is now in place where we have been putting the course in the past few years and each year we have to fit in according to the existing elements or have to flatten some of them. The original spot is a better amphitheatre for spectators and makes for a cosier feel, so that is what I will try for conditions dependant.

This year each resort is encouraged to bring their own form of Bib. This may be an opportunity for some local sponsorship, anything distinguishable will be fine from t shirts to spats or leg warmers, comedy wigs to head bands. Let your imaginations run wild, I know mine has. If any of you struggle let me know and I will supply strips of cloth as we have used in previous years.

The exciting news is that a show called Snowfix on the Extreme channel have decided to do a 6 minute segment from the Boss des Bosses so you could end up on tv if you land / big wipeout.

Last year there was a lull last year between the end of Prize giving and the coaches so we are organising some additional entertainment in the Rue des Moulins to bridge the gap between 8 and 10pm hopefully with a little street food.

I know it is a bit of a taboo subject that is rarely mention but the phenomenon which is collectively known as "Chalet girl arse" is starting to shows it effects around resort. After a 3 month diet that would make Dr Atkins turn in his grave the consumption of cake, French bread, pasta, vache and beer are starting to show their effects.

Once petit figures are now straining the stitches of their salopettes as their thighs try to escape. In an attempt to remedy this the cut of skiers new salopettes are starting to resemble something befitting of a more relaxed style of a snowboarder. Braces which previously supported their trousers are now purely for show and are rarely hung over shoulders.

Now there's nothing wrong with the more fuller figured chalet girl, until it comes to the end of season ball. When many girls send home for a smart dress to wear only to find that it has mysteriously shrunk in the post.

GTS

Players of playstations will have probably come across the acronym GTA. Instead of Grand theft Auto this acronym denotes the winter version Grand Theft Skidoo. Last week Andy(Mark Warner) while crossing the piste outside Kalico came across a snow mobile with the engine running. The temptation was almost unbearable and before you knew it Andy was astride the machine and revving the throttle. Before you could say "Can I go for a ride" a handful of pisteurs rushed to stop him in his tracks. Unfortunately Andy's escape wasn't as straight forward but rather straight back. The skidoo was left in reverse and Andy shot backwards towards the Kalico where he dismounted and burst through the front door, breaking one of them in the process, hoping to blend in with the late après-ski crowd. Again unfortunately there were only 10 people in the club and he was promptly cuffed by the rossers. Luckily no charges were pressed and with the exception of the charge for fixing Kalico's front door got away relatively scott free.

Good bye Will

I know it's hard to believe but like a bad smell Will Gill has been lingering around resort. Every time he is expected to depart circumstances move against him and he has to stay. But don't worry he will be back for the end of March and the end of April.

Geroge -who?

Following an edict from up above it has been made clear to me that from now on any mention of Georgie will no longer be followed by an association with any specific tour operator.

New Jump Staff

Following the departure of Polly from the Jump bar new girl Lorna has taken her place. I'm sure it won't be long before her innocence is totally corrupted. From previous experience I think it took Harri(Jump) about 1 month of working with Nic and Nicki before "that" big night in Kalico changed her forever.
