For many the single-most best day of any season workers' winter will always be this annual meeting of the resorts at the Grands Montets for the Boss des Bosses.

After the last three years, Zermatt finally relinquished their hold on the trophy, if only by the narrowest of margins. After Chamonix and Zermatt both dominated over the other resorts to get to the final, the score swayed from one side to the other until they were deadlocked at 6-6 with one final skier to race. Before the last racer had even started, because he was a stand-in for their top man, the Zermatt judge was almost resigned to the inevitable loss, which 30 seconds later came true giving Chamonix the win for the first year since 2006.

After a great day of entertainment on the hill, everyone headed down to La Terrasse in the centre of town for a rave-style party, fuelled by superb video mashups (including Thunderbirds, Star Trek, Eminem/Edit Piaf and The Streets/Elvis Presley) on the big screen.

Jen helps Amy up at the end of their run

The six resorts were initially divided into two groups with Courchevel racing against defending champions Zermatt and Verbier.

The first race of the day was Courchevel vs Zermatt and run after run it was clear why Zermatt had been so successful in the past. Luckily Lara managed to stop a complete whitewash when she beat Zermatt's top girl. Tom Kenny, Courchevel's last skier, re-dislocated his shoulder while landing from the kicker ending his day. The final score 12-1.

Courchevel were soon back in action against Verbier where Oscar (Powder white) and Ryan (Snowlinx) both managed to win their races. Ryan finished off his run with a clean method air while Ryan landed a clean front flip. Lara was unlucky that her opposite number jumped the start but was not penalised and despite catching her up lost out on style points. Ben Vincent attempted a Lincoln loop that turned into a D-spin 5 but couldn't quite control the landing. Had he been successful it would have been the trick of the competition. The final score was 2-11.

In our final race against neighbours Meribel Oscar (Power white) got Courchevel's first point. Ryan's (Snowlinx) over-rotated his final flip landing heavily on his back. Jen (Kili) broke her duck when she beat Amy from Meribel and was quickly joined by Lara. Mike, Tom's replacement, got Courchevel last point. Giving a respectable score of 4-8.

Now it's easy to scoff at these scores but if you saw the overall level of competition I can say that everyone in the team gave 110% and did amazingly well. Respect is due to them all.

Claire pays for sex

With the imminent departure of the Swedish hockey boys Claire (Jump) put her hands in her pockets and offered Scott an undisclosed sum to cover her shift at work so she could take an evening off to, put it politely, get some. Unfortunately their departure had been pushed forward which meant a night of Swedish meatballs was replaced by a light snack of Swedish tongue.

Aaron gets his for free

In comparison Aaron and Ben spent the evening chatting up two young Swedish ladies. After their bowling date was cancelled they went straight to getting them drunk. It obviously worked as they both woke up on Friday with a blonde Swedish hot water bottle next to each of them.

Injuries of the week

Thanks partly to Gilly's (Powder White) friends Mr Gin and Mr Tonic Gilly was practicing her famous memory loss and face planting at (insert location here). She's now looking like she went three rounds with.

Chanel (Physio) broke her ankle while jumping in the snowboard park. She now is the proud owner of 2 pins and luckily due to her nice employers she will stay out for the remainder of the season, working in their office.

Jane (Kalico) became the latest victim of the last run home. While on the flat Plan de main she fell messing up her knee. At the moment she is waiting for an MRI to determine the extent of the damage. Hopefully they won't include words like ligament and tear.

Test Technique

Congratulations to Sally from Magic in Motion and her little sister Sophie who both passed their test technique earlier this week. Sally by 8/10th of a second and Sophie by 3 seconds. So no more donning the mouse suit and being chased by a group of kids anymore.
