Injury of the week

Looking back over this season it appears that working at Kaluma is somewhat jinxed. First Frank went home after a knife cut on his hand went septic, then Emma had to let the NHS deal with a nasty rash (not from Sammy G). Hannah was accidentally glassed (but not injured) by an intoxicated Jonny on Jenny's birthday. Now it's game over for Emma who blew out her knee ligaments while testing some new K2 missdemaneors.

Things I've learnt this week

- 1 Will Gill does an excellent Jack Bauer impression
- 2 Fernella(Powderwhite) makes an awesome cheese cake
- 3 Lizzie(Kaluma) has a smoking hot body which she finally showed a little of on Tuesday night

The Courchevel Enquirer Tuesday night fever

Louis, Chanel, Alex, Jonny, Amber

Earlier last week there was a meeting between managers from most of the ski companies in 1850. The topic was the collaboration of events throughout the week. Now without sounding like a pessimist although this is a good sign in the end it will never realistically work as not all companies have their days off on the same day. In the old days most staff had Wednesday off so all events took place around that date. With the recent departure of many ski companies this year there is a more even split between Wednesday & Thursday. Now some companies, like Scott Dunn, in the past have been very good in changed their day off when a group of their staff have wanted to take part in an event, and others have steadfastly said it's more than their jobsworth to do. In my opinion this will never change and Courchevel will remain divided.

But answer me this. Can seasonnaires only go out for a big one on the night before their day out? In the past the answer was a resounding NO but it seems this is changing to a disappointing YES. Isn't berroca, alka seltzer and Red bull enough to get you up in the morning after only a couple of hours sleep?

Because of this theme nights and parties that are organised by independent companies, like the Kalico, will only be attended by the select (hardcore) few like the ski physios(see above).

A note from the editor

Nine weeks down and about 9 weeks to go. It's half time of this winter season, orange segments and a pep talk in the locker room, the seasonnaire hoodies are sorted, Valentines day is almost on us and hopefully it should start getting a little warmer (both on and off the piste). Regulars will know that this also means it's time to recycle some classic articles like sex lines and love eggs on page 2.

SEX LINES AND LOVE EGGS

This week Reg explores the Hows and the Wheres of SEX LINES and LOVE EGGS! No, not the seedy 0898 "Cover my Chocolate in Cream" type lines or those 'Housewife's "Two soaps on a rope", for that internal cleaning and freshening while you shop! This refers to those massive cables that criss-cross the mountain with pumping pods, titillation tubs, oral ovals, copulation capsules, gonad gondolas, buggery bubbles hanging from them! Yes the Verdon, Viselle etc, call them what you want, but at some time or other, we've all had an urge to join The Pylon-High Club. First the How's.

1) Access

I have no doubt that if it is your first season, you were not thinking about easy of access for in-bubble-action when you chose your two tone All-in-one (If you did choose an All-in-one you obviously weren't thinking at all!). Boarders have always had the benefit of loose fitting baggy pants, easy to get down without having to remove your jacket. Shoulder straps are becoming a thing of the past, and this season most makes of ski pants have a zip on/off braces facility so you can avoid the complete strip. I have been assured by those ladies who admitted to being experienced, that try as you might, unless you have full length leg zips one boot is going to have to come off, so one leg can be freed from all trouser restrictions.

2) Positions

This will depend on design of bubble and personnel choice! For the smaller face-to-face bubble, such as those up from Le Praz or the Chenus, the Turkish Toilet position is the old favourite, (He sits and she reverses on and bounces). This will involve removal of one boot and the trousers to allow the appropriate freedom of leg movement.

In the stand-up bubble, (Mont Valon, or La Tania) there is a bar specially provided for the lucky lady to cling to while being taken roughly from behind. No wonder the Mount Valon bubble is called the Chalet girls favourite!

The Verdon, Visselle and Par du Lac have plenty of room for experimentation. So let's hear about your 'Lifts of lust'!

3) Top tips,

Get prepared in the queue. The colder the day the better, so the windows steam up as quickly as possible.

Watch out for people coming down on the opposite side. Don't get seen by one of your punters. (A couple was seen, reported, sacked, then appeared in the British press. No, I'm not joking!) Finish and dress before reaching the top.

Walk out of the bubble as if nothing has happened. Or pretend you've got sunburn.

ALWAYS USE PROTECTION.

4) Famous Five

5) Bride Les Bains (Half an hour through the trees, but watch out for the two mid-stations. Leave time to get home as it takes you up to Meribel)

4) Either lift up from Le Praz. (Long, quiet, in the trees, mists up quickly, but a little small for manoeuvres.)

3) La Tania (Quiet, picturesque, the built in sex bar, but not one of the longest)

2) The Chalet Girls Favourite Mount Valont (Stunning view, sex bar, good length, but very visible.)

1) The Saullire Telepherique (The ultimate challenge, enough room for an orgy, your own chauffeur, all sorts of bars to swing from, but it is one of the quickest lifts in the Alps.)

Black ice

With the current Baltic temperatures looking to hang around over the weekend the conditions on the roads have been very treacherous. While coming back from Meribel just outside Le Praz I came across an out-of-town Kangoo on its side in the middle of the road(right). Looking at the tyre marks it looks like he lost control on a bend and hit the snow bank turning the car over. If that wasn't bad enough a few days later one of Courchevel's own buses went off the road while heading down to Bozel.(above) Initial rumours were that it was full of minis and gold bullion but this was later put down to watching too many Micheal Caine films.

Kalico Ipod battle

Bail, Chicken out, Ditch, Pussy out, no show, flake out, back out are just some of the words that could describe Aarons actions last Wednesday just before Kalicos 1st Ipod battle. As a result Jen(Killi) and Claire(Snolimit) who were supporting Lucy(Snolimit) were forced to take on a more local opposition. Unfortunately as Lucy's playlist was specifically designed to take on Aaron and not a collection of fruity gallic tunes and as each song was scored on audience participation and applause team Juicy Lucy supporters, all 6 of them, were soundly outnumbered by the French. So come to Kalico for apres on Wednesday for round 2 and hopefully the tables will be turned.
