

The Courchevel Enquirer

Slovenia's Tina Maze gets lowered down to the womens world cup slalom draw

A note from the editor

As the summer has shown us, the world is divided into many groups. When dividing these groups up a seemingly popular number to use is 99% and 1%. The have nots and the have-yachts. Or in Courchevel's case the 1% who can afford to stay in the K2. In the Enquirer's case you have the 99% "have a sense of humour" and the 1% who don't.

At the start of every season, without fail, I think I get confronted by 1 or 2 people who "don't get it" when it comes to the enquirer. This is nothing out of the ordinary. The naysayer de jour was especially concerned by my treatment of certain women. This would be very honourable, especially if this was the 18th century, (and I would be standing in a field with a dueling pistol) but in the 21st when most of the women I write about could open a jar of whopass without the help of man to firstly loosen the lid. He was also still holding a grudge about an incident that appeared on the back page of the final issue of last years enquirers. Not sure if he was bitter about me actually spending a night with the girl or of the photo and article that was submitted by the girl's co-managers...

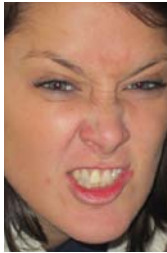

THE SURGEON GENERAL WARNS

Doing ski seasons can be highly addictive, can seriously damage your sanity, result in a general lack of sleep, makes your arse bigger, increase the chances of getting a blow job in the skidoo hut outside Kudeta and waking up next to a complete stranger.

A Christmasy moral dilemma

As we are in the season of good will I defy anyone to not welcome a parcel in their letterbox. That is unless the parcel doesn't have your name on it. Now before you think I'm opening any parcel that is put in my letter box, the parcel in question was clearly addressed to my apartment, but with no delivery name. It was sent all the way from Canada from a person I've never heard of. It contained no letter or delivery note, just a very nice woolly bobble hat, which judging from the makers tag, has a globe trotting carbon footprint larger than a BA frequent flier, started life in China, been shipped to Canada possibly via England and then back across the Atlantic to France.

So what would you do?

A: Nice hat – Christmas has come early

B: Santa delivered this by mistake – whats the return address at the north pole?

C: Right resort, wrong address. Can I be one of the elves and re-deliver it.

(answers below)

Threat of the week

“Write about [redacted] again and I'll cut you”

Lucky I redacted that otherwise I would be in for a “cutting”

Right to reply

If you disagree or feel you have been wronged by anything that is written on this sheet I offer you the right to reply. As long as its not obscene or overly offensive I will print it word for word.

Slimboy fat

I think, unless your name is Victoria Beckham becoming a parent for the first time usually results in an enlarged waistline after the pregnancy. One person who is finding this out the hard way is Aaron(endless winter). After losing several stone and becoming a possible poster boy for Jenny Craig last year, he's likely to lose his endorsement after piling on the baby pounds after becoming a dad for the first time.

Somewhere in the middle

The vestiere (Cloak room)

Given the choice most people, on a night out, would want to save their money by not putting their jacket in the cloakroom. Instead they stuff them under tables and on the back of chairs. Not only does this end up giving light handed pikeys a free for all but for anyone sober enough at the end of the night it provides a new spectator sport.

This amusing side of this is after last order have been called and you start to see various inebriated people circling the club trying to remember where they put their jacket. The record current goes to the ever quotable Jo who lapped me 6 times at the bar in the search for that elusive coat. Each time looking in exactly the same places. She was followed closely by another blonde pinball who only managed 5 laps ricocheting off furniture/people/the bar before her legs gave out.

That gives me a good idea for a new YouTube program. Have a field of (very) drunk people in a dark club, the winner is the one who finds his jacket first and makes it out the door. In the starting gate we have "Where's my coat?" followed by "I can see drunk people", "Have you seen my roommate?" and "I really need to pee". As they enter the first turn "Do you have a lighter?" takes an early lead but is forced to the dancefloor by "Is there time for another shot?" and "Have I paid my tab?". But it's "Do I still smell of vomit?" who wins it by a nose.

It could even see it being televised on one of those late night casino channels.

I WANT YOU!

The Courchevel Enquirer comes out every Saturday. I look forward to hearing from you.

Confidentiality assured! honestly!!

One of the major criticisms, One of the MANY major criticisms I get about this paper is that of all the Courchevel villages it only covers 1850 and sometimes 1650. The explanation for this is simple. I live in and drink around the bars of 1850 and so I hear what goes on in 1850. That's were you come in. If you have any stories, gossip, photos, suggestions etc. I want to hear from you.

I am usually in one of the 1850 bars every evening. Alternatively for those of you who are more technically minded you can email be directly on info@courchevelenquirer.com
