The Courchevel Enquirer

The local Marie is taking extreme steps to stop overtaking on the road to Val Thorens

A note from the editor

Do you ever get the feeling that nature doesn't like you. Not you personally (although I think Courchevel sport director Bruno Tuaire may disagree). Here you are stuck halfway up a mountain trying to scratch a meager living from your fledgling chalet business. We start with a delayed opening of all the pistes, no snow on the stade de Slalom resulting in the cancellation of the FIS woman's world cup giant slalom and then we have more snow than even the French can deal with. We then have regular heavy snowfalls timed at the most inappropriate moments for most of the companies, usually over the weekends when clients are leaving/arriving and now this weekend a rock (not THE rock) thought to weigh about 100 tonnes although this was later reduced to 50 tonnes landed on the road to Valley de Belleville basically fucking with the traffic from Val Thorens/Les Menuires/St Martin de Belleville and backing everything up down to Moutiers with additional problem to all the other surrounding resorts. I'm waiting for a +30 degree heat wave to arrive just before Easter. Oh Mother Nature though art a cruel mistress!

THE SURGEON GENERAL WARNS

Doing ski seasons can be highly addictive, can seriously damage your sanity, result in a general lack of sleep, makes your arse bigger, increase the chances of getting a blow job in the skidoo hut outside Kudeta and waking up next to a complete stranger.

All stories contained within are purely fictional and shouldn't be taken seriously.

Anyone found taking anything too seriously should be held down, given alcohol and violated with the handle of a ski pole.

Injuries of the week

On the left the large gash belongs to Ollie from the St Louis after he did the classic skiers trick, the ol knee to the chin. Since December this is now known as the “Harry Styles” after the one direction singer recieved a similar injury while skiing with girlfriend Taylor Swift. After many stitches and a painful 180 euro bill Ollie was back at work.

On the right, the Funky Fox’s Alice Beer who managed to break her wrist while snowboarding, a very common boarding injury. So always wear wristguards.

Kaluma Ski

Kaluma travel are looking for a new host for one of their luxury Courchevel 1850 chalets for the remainder of the winter season. If you would like more information or want to send your CV then contact Kaluma on info@kaluma-travel.co.uk as soon a possible.

Whats in a name?

It appears that Whitestorm's Simon Hooper is getting jealous of his posh employee Toby with his highfaluting double barreled name. So he has changed his name on his new business cards to Simon Hooper-Giles. Sounds posher already. right?, although now he has to contend with sounding completely pussy whipped and subservience by taking his significant other's name. Although it would make cards impartially large he should write Simon nolongerthemanintherelationshipbitchdominatedgrey-lord-Hooper-Giles. Sounds almost royal.

After spending a tough morning harassing people for cigarettes outside the forum. Frenchie "the tramp" decided to take a well earned (and possibly pharmaceutically induced) nap on the top floor of the Forum by the escalaters. After a short while the Pompiers were called and spend a good 10 minutes trying to get him back on his feet and out of sight.

Smarter every day.

To keep balance in the universe (after last weeks snowboarding piece) this week we have the names for all the different (and wrong) ways to carry skis.

But Alex!, I hear you say, isn't "the local" the correct way to carry your skis? No because the tips of the skis should always be at the front!
